A place that smells, sounds and tastes like... KRAKOW

Do you sometimes dream of having the sixth sense...? For us, five are enough to discover Krakow anew! Your palate will enjoy the Krakow specialties: mead, thick chocolate, a gold pretzel and crispy baguette. Your ear will listen to stories captured in unusual-unusual items. Your hand will touch mossy walls and towers that still live the lives of their residents. The royal smell of Krakow will help you see farther than your eye can see. Will you allow yourself to be seduced by your senses?

The game for:

- travellers experiencing the world through all senses
- tourists dreaming of a real challenge instead of a traditional sightseeing
- businesspeople wishing to make their visit in Krakow more attractive by means of something unconventional

Challenge:

A well-known publishing company has asked you to create a subjective guidebook of Krakow. Each chapter is supposed to be devoted to one of the five senses. To be able to describe something, you have to experience it. Of course, on site. During your mission, you will perform different tasks and capture the most important moments in a photo album. The book will also include your reflections and ready materials delivered by experts. You will work in teams as two noses are better than one...

The example tasks:

TASTE:

- prepare a famous Krakow baguette – the longer, the tastier and the quicker prepared it is – the more points you will get from an expert!
- do you have the courage to eat something you have never seen before? Try local dishes... blindfolded!
- let your emotions subside and then prepare the most inventive chocolate form that you associate with Poland

SMELL:

Go up against experts! Create a smell that will best show the character of Krakow and then compare it with the one that already exists. Gather the ingredients on your road to the goal.

HEARING:

Sounds will be your guide. Instead of a traditional map, you will follow the clues you hear through your headphones to reach the subsequent sound-stations. It will be St. Mary's Trumpet Call, a street organ grinder or a folk band. You finally reach the Museum of Sounds whose exhibits will tell you the story about Krakow's past without any words.

TOUCH:

- check how many people can travel in a city tram
- create an exceptionally long wall of pedestrians to encircle the Old Town
- find your way out of a dark City Hall Tower in absolute silence, communicating with the team members only by means of gesture
- ...and many others!

A person who relies too heavily on his eyes neglects his other senses – and I mean more than his hearing or sense of smell.

Your hand will touch mossy walls and towers that still live the lives of their residents. The royal smell of Krakow will help you see farther than your eye can see. Will you allow yourself to be seduced by your senses?

Logistics:

The participants get around Krakow on foot, in small teams. They have fragments of the map and headphones with the recording. Leaders monitor the challenge to make sure all the participants will finish in a designated place. The group is accompanied by a professional photographer, who will capture every single moment.

Advantages:

- deep experience of the royal city of Krakow
- facing up to your own limitations – fear of the unknown
- opening yourself to experiencing the world with all senses
- integration of the team by concentrating on a mutual goal
- excellent fun in a former capital of Poland
- receiving a personalised souvenir from the expedition – a photo album

Variants / Extensions:

- the programme can be extended or shortened, depending on the group's expectations
- while travelling across Krakow, the team can concentrate only on selected senses

The game through the eyes of the participants:

"I usually forget I have so many senses.
This programme was a perfect exercise for them."

"Why isn't this fascinating way of sightseeing practised in other cities?"
